How to Play: Roll and Read

Two players, one board, one die. About ten minutes. The student pages carry no directions, so teach this once.

Materials

- One die for each pair (or six small number cards 1 to 6 in a cup).
- A different color of crayon or marker for each player.
- One Roll and Read board (pages 7-12) and a My Game Record (page 19).

Six steps

- Give each pair one board and one die. Each player picks a color to color with.
- Roll the die. The die face matches the dots over a column. If it shows 3, use the column with 3 dots.
- Read the top word with no color on it in that column, out loud. Color the word. If the partner heard it read right, it stays colored.
- Partner's turn. Pass the die and take turns.
- If the column is full, roll again.
- Stop when the timer rings or the board is full of color. Count your colored words. Fill in My Game Record.

One player

Roll, read, color. Try to color one whole column, then play again on the same board to color the rest.

Partner check

The partner points to the word as it is read. If it was not right, say it together, then read it again. The word stays colored.

Listen for

- Does the student say the vowel sound first, or guess from the first letter?
- Does the student read the word smoothly, or sound out each letter? Either is fine; note which.

Easier, the Same, or a Step Up

Three ways to play the same boards, for students who need more support and students who are ready for more.

Starting

● More support

- Play one vowel board only, with you or an adult as the partner.
- Say the first word of each turn together before the student reads alone.
- Use only the first three rows of Roll and Read, or the first nine spaces of Spin and Race.

Building

■ The game as written

- One vowel board, two players, ten minutes.
- Move to the next vowel when the student reads the board with few words to practice.

Ready for more

▲ A step up

- Play the mixed boards: all five vowels, so the student checks the vowel in every word.
- After reading a word, the student says one sentence with it.
- Read two words in a row before coloring or moving.

What to say while they read (prompts for the adult)

- "Point to the vowel. What sound does it make?"
- "Say each sound. Now blend them."
- "Read it again, a little faster."
- "What word did your partner read?"
- "Find a word on the board with the same ending."
- "Nice reading. Which word was hard?"

Which boards did you use?

A Filled-In Record: Example

Maya is an invented student. These numbers are made up to show how the record works; they are not a goal or a norm.

Day	Game	Vowel	Words read	Missed	Read right	Words to practice
Mon	Roll and Read	short a	10	1	9	zap
Tue	Spin and Race	short a	12	2	10	gap, wag
Wed	Roll and Read	short e	11	1	10	ref
Thu	Spin and Race	short e	14	2	12	keg, web
Fri	Roll and Read	short i	9	0	9	–
		Week total	56	6	50	–

How the numbers work

- Read right = words read minus missed. Monday: 10 − 1 = 9.
- Week: 5 games, 56 words read, 6 missed, 50 read right.
- Check: 56 − 6 = 50.

What to do with it

- Words to practice this week: zap, gap, wag, ref, keg, web. They came up in the games; read them again together.
- Play the next vowel when a board has few words to practice.
- Fill in the Class Game Log (page 21) to keep the pattern.

Words to practice, big

zap gap wag ref keg web

Your turn

- Count the words read on the board, subtract the words missed, and write the result in Read right.
