Kindness Coloring Pages: Start Here

What's inside

- Four slogan pages (pages 3-6): big outline words in our own wording, one picture group on each, all black and white with large open spaces to color
- Kindness rainbow (page 7): seven bands to color and five hearts
- Kind acts (page 8): 8 things a child can do. The child does one, then colors its heart
- One kind thing I did (page 9): a drawing box and three handwriting lines that begin "I was kind when I"
- Kindness Star (page 10): a star to color and give to someone, with lines for the name and the reason
- Credits and what's next (page 11)

That is 8 pages for children to color.

How to use it

Print on white paper. Every page except the Kindness Star starts with a "My name" line and one short instruction, so a child can pick one up and begin. The pages are line art, so they print well in black and white and use little ink. Crayons, markers and colored pencils all work.

Ideas

- Morning work or a calm corner: leave a few slogan pages in a folder with crayons
- Kindness week: hang the finished slogan pages on a hallway wall, or use them for Random Acts of Kindness Week
- A kind-acts challenge: send page 8 home for a week, then collect the "One kind thing I did" pages (page 9) and read a few aloud
- Recognition: write a child's name and the kind thing you saw on the Kindness Star (page 10) and send it home

Which page for which child

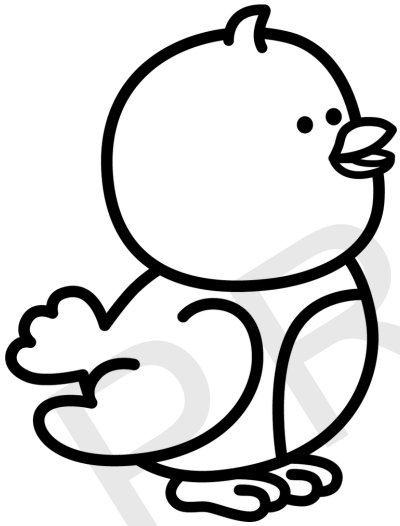

The slogan pages ask only for coloring, a good first page. The kind acts page asks for a short act and a colored heart. The writing page asks for a drawing and one sentence; a child who is not writing yet can draw and tell you, and you can write the words. The district's or school's own kindness or behavior program, if you use one, goes in your own words on the blank lines you add.
